

THE BJÖRKEGREN EXPEDITIONS TO FRENCH INDOCHINA: A COLLECTION OF BIRDS FROM VIETNAM AND CAMBODIA

J.C. Eames¹ and P.G.P. Ericson²

ABSTRACT

Details are given of a collection of birds made during 1935 and 1938/39 in Cambodia and Vietnam by the Swedish ornithologist Bertil Björkegren. The collecting localities, together with dates and sex, are provided for all the specimens where available. In addition, notes made by Björkegren are included for selected species. Most notably, Björkegren collected the type and paratypes of the Grey-crowned Crocias Crocias langbianis. Most of the collection was made at Sa Pa in north-west Vietnam and in the western highlands in southern Vietnam. The collection is retained in the Swedish Museum of Natural History, Stockholm.

INTRODUCTION

The ornithological exploration of French Indochina (Cambodia, Laos and Vietnam) was pioneered by European ornithologists. The reader with only a passing acquaintance of the ornithological history of the region will be familiar with such names as Boden Kloss, Delacour, Engelbach, Jabouille and Robinson. Less well known, however was one Bertil Vilhelm Bertelson Björkegren who travelled in Cambodia and Vietnam in 1935 and again in 1938/39.

On his two visits Björkegren travelled and collected birds and mammals on behalf of the Swedish Museum of Natural History in Stockholm. His most notable contribution to ornithology was the discovery of a new species of bird, Grey-crowned Crocias Crocias langbianis (GYLDENSTOLPE, 1939, EAMES, 1994). His collection, collecting diary, maps and correspondence are retained at the Swedish Museum of Natural History.

Despite his considerable contribution to the ornithology of the region, his collection and exploits have hitherto remained undocumented. This paper briefly documents his two expeditions undertaken in 1935 and 1938/39. We provide a full list of the bird specimens he obtained, furnishing details of the collecting locality, date and sex of all the specimens where available, and discuss the significance of the collection.

NARRATIVE OF THE EXPEDITIONS

In 1935 Björkegren visited Cambodia and Vietnam for approximately two months after which he despatched a collection of 65 bird specimens to Sweden. In February or March 1938 he returned to Vietnam for a more lengthy stay and remained until April 1939. He also planned a third visit to Vietnam, which was never undertaken.

Björkegren was a good correspondent and frequently wrote to his mentor and sponsor Count Nils Gyldenstolpe at the Swedish Museum of Natural History. We therefore have a fairly clear picture of the chronology of his travels in French Indochina and in this narrative we quote his correspondence extensively.

Having left Marseille on 22 January 1935, Björkegren's ship docked in Colombo on 10 February and then in Singapore from 19–21 February, before finally arriving in Saigon. By early March, Björkegren was already collecting 35 km north-east of Trang Bom and at Bao Cat, some 30 km north-east of Saigon (Figure 1). In early April he collected at a locality he named "Border river", north-east of Bao Cat, along the River La Nga in Vietnam, and at Soai Rieng in Cambodia. Following this short visit Björkegren despatched 65 bird specimens which arrived at the Swedish Natural History Museum on 2 July 1935.

Three years later Björkegren sailed for Saigon once more. The Bernadin de St Pierre docked in Saigon in March 1938 and Björkegren immediately began trying to obtain the necessary paperwork to permit his collecting. His first setback was to learn that the Governor General did not live in Saigon but in Hanoi. After considering whether to take the train to Hanoi to seek an audience with the Governor, he was advised to seek authorization through the consulate in Saigon, which he finally did. He then travelled to Di Linh and hence onto Da Lat via Lom Ba. In Da Lat, his collecting plans were once again delayed until he obtained the necessary authorization to collect on the Lang Bian Plateau. Whilst waiting for permission, he spent time attempting to hunt big game with a French railway officer and his wife. The result was a collection of 50 birds and 10 smaller mammals, but no sign of any big game. At this time Björkegren engaged two of Delacour's preparators, the elder remaining at home preparing skins whilst the younger man assisted Björkegren in the field.

During March, April and May he collected around Da Lat, making excursions east to Arbrey Broyé on 11 April and south to Di Linh on 15 April. On 7 April Björkegren wrote a letter to Count Gyldenstolpe (in translation) "This last week I have settled down and have found a promising locality for birds. Daytime I am shooting and at night I dream about birds. Between 15 and 20 birds fall every day as ripe fruit from the trees. I have no time for a close determination but I take aside what I can recognize and what I can find on plates in Delacour's and [Stewart] Baker's books." It was somewhere around Da Lat that on 5 April Björkegren obtained a male and a female of a hitherto unknown bird species, which together with a second specimen were subsequently described by Gyldenstolpe as Crocias langbianis (GYLDENSTOLPE, 1939, EAMES, 1994).

Some hint of Björkegren's modus operandi and character is revealed in his letter to Gyldenstolpe of 5 May which contains the following rather amusing anecdotes (in translation): "Yesterday I found snares in the forest and attached to them a letter where I asked the person in question to report to me those birds he possibly can catch."

..." When I came here I bought a small second hand truck. It was however impossible to drive on the soft and wet roads. I changed and got an excellent Renault, which made me happy until I overturned with it and landed in the ditch upside down. With my usual luck I crept from the ruins without any scratch. Do not tell my mother. Luckily I had complete insurance and the insurance company gave me a Citroën which I hope to keep the whole time here."

By May 16 he had moved from the Da Lat Plateau to Phan Rang on the coast. From May 19 to July 12 he resided at the French military post at B'sré, some 65 km from Di Linh, making an excursion to Di Linh on June 25. Writing to Gyldenstolpe from B'sré on 1 June, we gain a strong indication of Björkegren's deteriorating financial circumstances, "The surroundings are expensive and my economical situation not bright. I do not know for how long I can stay here in Indochina, but already August is looking threatening for me. I have scraped together 1,000 crowns from home and I can also pay for my trip home. When is next payment from Lars Hierta's scholarship?"

Björkegren left B'sré in the middle of July and went to the hospital for a few days with a bout of fever. At the end of July he sent his collector to Thua Luu to collect birds. Björkegren then travelled to Cambodia, with the intention of collecting Bengal Florican Eupodotis bengalensis blandini and visiting Engelbach. From 22–29 July he collected at Siem Riep [Siem Reap] and from 31 July to 5 August at Angkor. In the ruins of Angkor Wat, he is alleged to have shot a Black Panther Panthera pardus (Cordier, pers. comm.). In addition to collecting White-shouldered Ibis Pseudibis davisoni, Björkegren mentions in his letter to Gyldenstolpe of 24 August, of seeing the "great ibis" Pseudibis gigantea in the company of Engelbach but that they were unable to obtain any specimens because, "...they were impossible to shoot." He then went to Soai Rieng where he did collect Bengal Florican as he had planned. He wrote (in translation) "After that I went to Soairieng (sic.) and got three Houbaropsis (syn. Eupodotis), but unfortunately the native had cut the primaries on two, the third is perfect."

Suffering from a renewed attack of fever, Björkegren returned to Da Lat in August to await Baron Johan Beckfriis, with whom he planned to go hunting. Björkegren's collector Tuan returned to Da Lat on 23 August with 100 bird specimens obtained at Thua Luu. Björkegren's finances were now very low and he was clearly despondent in his letter of 24 August of the prospect of returning to Sweden earlier than planned. During the remainder of August, September and early October he remained in Da Lat, moving north to Lao Bao by 11 October and remaining in its environs until 8 November, with forays to Khe Sanh on 5 and 10 November.

From 17 to 29 December, Björkegren collected at Sa Pa in north-west Tonkin, including a short excursion to Fan Si Pan at the end of the month. In his letter to Gyldenstolpe of 25 December 1938 he gave some indications of the difficulties he was experiencing in cooperating with Delacour's expedition. In connection with the employment of preparators he wrote (in translation), "...I have made a compromise with him [Delacour] and he has given me a preparator and pays half the cost in Chapa [Sa Pa] if we share the collection equally. I am not satisfied but it was the only way we could arrange it." In respect to the prices paid for specimens and their ownership he wrote (in translation) "...it has been difficult with prices on birds and mammals. Delacour has previously paid fantasy prices and the natives have not forgotten. So much better that we have agreed and set the prices to [our] mutual satisfaction. In spite of being forced to give Delacour half the collection, or more correctly ms Greenway museum Boston, I will see to it that we will not be losers."

On a brighter note, it is evident from this letter that Björkegren had at last received further financial support from the Lars Hierta scholarship and he offers thanks to Professor Lönnberg for his support. Most interestingly, in the same letter he reveals how before coming to Sa Pa he looked for Imperial Pheasant Lophura imperialis. He wrote (in translation) "In Donghoi and surroundings I have spent much money and almost 14 days looking for imperialis but with no result. I understand from talking with Delacour that he does not know where they come from. I have copied the sketch Countess Gyldenstolpe made for me on my first trip here and given it to Mandarin (sic.) and other high-ranking people and they have promised to let me know if any of these phantom pheasants will emerge."

Although Björkegren collected at Sa Pa until 20 February, he or (more likely) one of his party collected at Thua Luu on 4 and 6 February. From the 9 through to the 20 February the expedition was collecting once more at Sa Pa on Fan Si Pan and at Mi Ti ("two days journey from Chapa"). From 14 March to 1 April he collected at Thua Luu and Bach Ma. He returned to Sweden sometime after 1 April 1939.

Björkegren planned a third visit to Vietnam, which was never undertaken. It is not clear whether this was due to World War II, lack of finance or other unknown reasons. Björkegren lived in Africa from 1954 to 1966 and died on 13 November 1973 in Östra Sallerup, Malmö, Sweden.

ANNOTATED LIST OF BIRDS COLLECTED

This list is based on a typed manuscript which was written by Björkegren. It was written sometime after his return to Sweden in 1939 but the exact date is unknown. It was written on two different typewriters, initially in English, but with subsequent annotations in Swedish.

We have revised the taxonomy and sequence of species to follow SIBLEY & MONROE (1990). The subspecific determinations made by Björkegren as they appear in his manuscript have been omitted from this list. It is evident from reading his notes that many of the subspecific determinations were made superficially and Björkegren frequently noted the need for more material before an accurate determination can be made. Further annotations have been made by us where relevant. Since most of the collection was taken in Vietnam, we have prefixed the Cambodian collecting localities by mentioning that country, we hope that will add clarity for the reader. New distributional records for Vietnam are mentioned following the suggested sub-divisions of that country given in KING ET AL. (1975). French names and anglicized Vietnamese names have not been italicized. For brevity, M = male and F = Female.

DISCUSSION

Björkegren obtained 2,308 bird specimens during his two expeditions to Cambodia and Vietnam. His collection, although more modest in size than those made by the French and British, is very well prepared and documented. Most specimens were prepared as study skins, only six birds are preserved in alcohol. Table 1 includes a breakdown of the collection by country and main collecting locality. It can be seen that most of the collection (94%) was taken in Vietnam. One quarter of all the specimens were taken at Sa Pa (including Fan Si Pan), whilst more than 40% were taken at localities in the vicinity of Da Lat in the western highlands.

Most of the localities at which Björkegren obtained his specimens had been subject to the previous attentions of ornithologists. The exceptions were the French military post at B'sré, Lom Ba, Monoi and Trang Bom. In this respect Björkegren's expeditions were very much in the footsteps of his peers and he broke only a little new ground.

The greatest ornithological discovery of his two expeditions was the discovery of Crocias langbianis. It is interesting that this species had been entirely overlooked by previous collectors who had worked in the environs of Da Lat (c.f. EAMES, 1994). His expeditions also added three new species to the list of birds for Cambodia and Vietnam, which comprised Plegadis falcinellus, Phalaropus lobatus and Emberiza tristrami.

Some of the species he failed to collect are also of interest. We noted earlier his attempt to find Lophura imperialis. At the time the species was only known from a live pair collected by Delacour and it was not until 1990 that a third specimen was collected (DELACOUR & JABOUILLE, 1931; ROBSON ET AL. 1993). This species remains to this day a "phantom pheasant."

Björkegren invested some time and effort collecting at Thua Luu, a well known collecting haunt of ornithologists at the time. This was a collecting locality for Lophura edwardsi but Björkegren was unable to obtain any, although he did find Carpococcyx renauldi, another lowland forest specialist. This may have been merely bad luck but equally it may have reflected the growing rarity of L. edwardsi, a taxon which may now be extinct and the deterioration of habitat at this site. Today Thua Luu is devoid of natural forest.

Björkegren was only 27 years old on his first visit to Vietnam. His correspondence is full of youthful impetuosity and determination to succeed in his quest to obtain a collection of birds for the Swedish Natural History Museum. His peers were older and more established figures who by virtue of their backgrounds and connections were able to draw on logistical support from the Government of French Indochina. Björkegren was by contrast working with a smaller retinue of collectors and who struggled with his expedition finances. Although Björkegren was the first and only Swedish ornithologist to have collected in Vietnam and Cambodia, he also numbered amongst the last Europeans to do so before the outbreak of the World War II.

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

We gratefully acknowledge the Swedish Museum of Natural History, Stockholm for kindly permitting access to Björkegren's collection and correspondence from the museum archives. Thanks are also due to Ms Britt-Marie Lindkvist for patiently translating correspondence from the original Swedish to English, and to Erik Ahlander for providing a short biographic profile of Björkegren. Thanks to Anita Pedersen for translating Björkegren's foot-notes and Mike Crosby for checking the geographical coordinates of place names. JCE would also like to thank the trustees of the Swedish Museum of Natural History for providing accommodation for his stay in Stockholm during 1993.
